THURSDAY, JUNE 25. 1740. No. 1564.

To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

I R,

IT is the Duty of every Member of Society, to contribute his Mite to the Service of his Country; I hope you will not deny the following a Place in your Paper.

I have often been press'd by a Crowd waiting to see the Savages at St. Dunstan's Whet exercise their Clubs upon the Bell that g between them: And t'other Day had the Curi- to observe their Performance from Mr. Deard's. When the Half-Hour was near expired, a large ber of People gather'd together, every one gape- open-mouth'd, for the wish'd-for Entertainment, Pleasure of Expectation being visible on each ntenance. As the Sounding Moment rush'd on, Eye eagerly fix'd on the active Mutes: But no r was their short Duty over, and Ding, Dong; , Ding, was found to improve neither the Eyes Understandings of the Novice-Auditors, than a of Disappointment murmur'd thro' the separa- Crowd.

know nothing so like this as the Behaviour of a day Morning of Politicians, which I have often Opportunity of observing.—— As each Man en- the Room, an Intention to be pleased sits on every ntenance, and when the Gentleman who has the ur to officiate as Orator of the Table, contracts Muscles with an important Hem, an approving nity seizes the whole Company;—— tho' Mr. ers, who has always the first Stroke, commonly s an effectual Remedy for reducing their Fea- ; and when Mr. Common Sense has sounded his of the Bell, every Man strives to be first at his olate, and a disappointed Silence succeeds; till d Gentleman, of remarkable Penetration, grave- s—Well, what think you, Gentlemen?—— To all seem unwilling to reply, till one yawns out— , I think there is nothing extraordinary in either of —Nor do I, says a second; and after that Af- as encompass'd the Table, it is always agreed these Saturday Savages want necessary Spirit, the Saturday following is sure to bring the Com- together with the same Curiosity, and to sepa- them with the same Disappointment.

his Observation put me upon a Proposal which t save the Publick both Time and Money; which I doubt not, like most other ingenious Discove- will be thought easy when once known: My me being no more than having the Two divert- Savages at St. Dunstan's distinguish'd by the es of THE CRAFTSMAN and COMMON SEN- n, who would then be enabled to boast of the ation of the People, without the Danger of Con- tion.

erhaps some Dispute may arise from the Station of e Political Images:—For, should Mr. D'Anvers be ail'd on to turn his Back on a Protestant C—t, it be doubted whether, after so many Pretences of eft and Esteem, the Hero of White-Friars will illing to turn his on the City,— but he was never rkable for Politeness; and it is to be hoped, he ld prevail'd on to dispense with that Posture, he considers that as his Face will stand towards T——y, he will always have his main Point in .

pprehend that the Publick would be more bene- by the then useful Labours of these Watchmen e Publick Weal, than by their present Paper Ap- ance: For, when a Quarter is proclaimed by their nate Labour, their greedy Auditors will be con- d in a more important Particular, than, in a se of Years, their Writings have afforded:—— ir Works will gain a constant Attention, and their ance will be equally beneficial in Time of Peace War.

hose who live at a Distance from Town may, at Sight, be thought to suffer by this Improvement olitricks; but all Country Gentlemen may be more ble of the Publick Service of these Patriot Lights, ing assured that each of them, every Hour, gives Signals of the Necessity for Publick and Private Reformation, than being once a Week told, at all Events, that Things go wrong at St. J—s's. The short Life of Sound can be no Objection; as that is of equal Force against the sudden vanishing of the numberless Assurances they have given the Publick; so that the Difference between the Weekly Duration of these, and a Knell of half a Minute, can be no Hindrance to my Scheme taking place, as the more frequent Repetition of the latter will make ample Amends for that small Variation.

Thus, Sir, future Ages will witness our Gratitude to these laborious Servants of their Country, and when unrelenting Time shall return the Living Greatness and Common Sense to their originine Clay, their faithful Images will serve succeeding Ages with more Sincerity, and to more good Purposes, than the frail Beings they will represent.

I am, SIR,

Your very humble Servant,

GREGORY GAZER.

P. S. I had quite forgotten the Loss my Proposal may occasion to the worthy Under-operators, Mess. F. and P. But as these have always so far conformed to their Masters as to profess a Passion for their Country, in that Character they must prefer the Publick to their own Advantage, and be content with the Office of winding up their Masters' Statues, and setting them a going: This, I am told, is a weekly Operation; and, to make it more agreeable, it may be perform'd every Saturday Morning.

LONDON.

Having in our last mentioned the Death of the Prime Officer at the Court of Saxony, 'tis presum'd that some farther Notice of a Minister who liv'd to so great an Age, and shone with so much Lustre in the Northern Hemisphere, will not be displeasing to the Reader; and for this Reason we have consulted the Memoirs of the Baron de POLLNITZ: An Author perfectly acquainted with most Courts, but especially those of Prussia and Saxony; who, in his First Volume, gives this remarkable Account of the Birth and Parentage of the deceased Waldemar Baron de Loewendahl, and of his Advancement to the Honours he enjoy'd at the Saxon Court.

'He was by Birth a Dane, and descended from a 'Count of Guldenlowe, a Natural Son of the Blood 'Royal of Denmark. He spent his Youthful Days 'in the Service of the States-General, and was made 'a Captain in the Blue Guards; which he afterwards 'quitted and went into the Service of the Emperor 'Leopold, and distinguish'd himself in Quality of a 'Lieutenant-Colonel in 1683 at the raising the Siege 'of Vienna; after which he return'd to Denmark. 'But leaving that Court upon some Disgust, became 'into Saxony, where Augustus II. declar'd him Pre- 'sident of the Chamber, which Office he held when 'the King of Denmark recall'd him home. It was 'with the Approbation of his Master the King of 'Poland that he return'd to Copenhagen, where his 'Danish Majesty gave him the Command of the Army 'in Norway against the Swedes; which Com- 'mission he discharged with so much Honour, that 'he was dignify'd with the Order of the Elephant, as 'he had already been with that of Dannebroc. He 'might, if he pleas'd, have enjoy'd the greatest Of- 'fices in Denmark; but he had promis'd Augustus II.

' not to forsake him, so that he refus'd all the Ad' vantages which Frederick IV. offer'd him, and re-
' turn'd into Saxony, when the late King created
' him Knight of the Order of the White Eagle, and
' appointed him Grand Marshal; which was a Post
' that gave him the first Rank at the Court of Saxo-
' ny, because the Elector is Arch Grand Marshal of
' the Empire; and he had under him

' The Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber.	' The Trumpeters.
	' The Dancers.
' The Messengers and Footmen.	' The Comedians.
	' The Footmen.
' The Pages.	' The Turks.
' The Huntsmen.	' The Heyduks.
' The Musicians of the Chapel and Chamber.	' The Negroes.'

' And, in short, a considerable Number of other
' Officers and Domesticks of the King's Houshold;
' and his Jurisdiction extended over all Foreigners of ' Quality that happen'd to be at Dresden. In this ' Post he dy'd, reverenc'd by the Courtiers, and
' esteem'd by the present King of Poland: And our
' Author remarks, that his Majesty is the sixth King
' whom this Minister has serv'd.'

The Baron de POLLNITZ does Justice also to the Personal Bravery of the Deceased's youngest Son, a Major-General of the King's Armies, Inspector-General of the Saxon Infantry, and Colonel of a Regiment of Foot; and he is very particular in the Character of the Count de Bruhl, who is like to succeed the Deceased as Great Marshal and First of the Cabinet Council: But those the Curious Reader will turn to at his Leisure in the Book itself.
